

Since the Indiana Telephone Privacy law has been established, I no longer receive unwanted telephone calls. I understand the concept of creating a blanket law for the Nation. However, I do not feel confident that it would meet the same standards as the State of Indiana did during the creation of the Privacy Law. I feel the State took a strong approach to put an end to unwanted calls. This law does have an impact on the daily lives of the citizens of the State. It is less stressful to know that I will not receive the unwanted calls and will not be interrupted while spending time with my family. Life is too short to waste time on answering the phone only to find out it is someone wanting to sell you something or to complete a survey, etc. Please let the State do its job in representing the citizens of Indiana. Please do not create a National Standard regarding the Telephone Privacy Law. Thank you.
